Research Interests: Northeast Asian political and security issues.

Denny Roy's work has focused mostly on Asia Pacific security issues, particularly those involving China. His interests include not only traditional military-strategic matters and foreign policy, but also international relations theory and human rights politics.

Before joining the East-West Center in 2007, Roy worked at the Asia-Pacific Center for Security Studies in Honolulu for seven years, rising to the rank of Professor after starting as a Research Fellow. In 1998--2000 Roy was a faculty member in the National Security Affairs Department at the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey, California. There he taught courses on China, Asian history, and Southeast Asian politics. He also designed and taught an innovative course titled Human Rights and National Security in Asia.

From 1995 to 1998, Roy was a Research Fellow with the Strategic and Defence Studies Centre at the Australian National University in Canberra, where he studied and wrote on Northeast Asian security issues. He also participated in educational activities with the Australian armed forces and the Australian College of Defence and Security Studies. In January and February 1997 Roy was attached to the Singapore Armed Forces Training Institute as coordinator for Singaporean students enrolled in the SDSC's M.A. program.

From 1990 to 1995, Roy held faculty appointments in the Political Science Departments of the National University of Singapore (Lecturer) and Brigham Young University (Assistant Professor), teaching courses on international relations and Asian politics.

Roy has five years of work and residency experience in Taiwan, Korea and Singapore. He has made presentations at academic conferences in China, Thailand, Korea, Singapore, Taiwan, Japan and Australia. He is conversant in Mandarin Chinese and fulfilled his graduate school foreign language qualification in Korean.

Roy is the author of Taiwan: A Political History (Cornell University Press, 2003) and China's Foreign Relations (Macmillan and Rowman & Littlefield, 1998), co-author of The Politics of Human Rights in Asia (Pluto Press, 2000) and editor of The New Security Agenda in the Asia-Pacific Region (Macmillan, 1997). He has also written many articles for scholarly journals such as International Security, Survival, Asian Survey, Security Dialogue, Contemporary Southeast Asia, Armed forces & Society, and Issues & Studies.
