Deputy Chief of Staff, G-2
Headquarters, Department of the Army
Washington, D.C.

Ms Mary Lynn Schnurr is the Army Intelligence Chief Information Officer for the Deputy Chief of Staff, G-2 (DCS, G-2) and Director of the Intelligence Community Information Management Directorate. She plays a pivotal role in providing operational and technical advice on infrastructure and intelligence community information management/information technology (IM/IT) endeavors. She is responsible for formulating the strategic management and integration of Army Intelligence IM/IT systems with the Joint, National, and Intelligence Community intelligence IM/IT systems. Her focus is on long-range strategies and new trends in technology development to provide accurate and timely support to tactical, operational, and strategic-level operations throughout Army, and to support all aspects of Army transformation. She has committed to improving intelligence systems readiness to the Warfighter with emphasis on quick reaction capabilities in support of OEF/OIF. She has served as an IM/IT professional in a variety of positions in Army Intelligence since she began her Army career as an intern in 1981. Prior to her position with Army she was an educator and a member of a congressional staff.
