

Dr. Michael Holtje received his J.D. from the University of Nebraska College of Law and Ph.D. in Psychology (Decision Making) from the University of Nebraska. His doctoral work, supported by the National Science Foundation, examined certain behavioral assumptions underlying laws and policies governing legal and economic decision making. In 2008, he accepted a Presidential Management Fellowship with the U.S. Department of State, Bureau of Intelligence & Research. He has served as an Intelligence Operations Specialist responsible for Intelligence Community Policy, Intelligence Operations, and Foreign Intelligence Partnerships. He has completed rotations with the Department's Office of the Legal Adviser and with the Director of National Intelligence, Office of Foreign and Military Partnerships. Recently, Dr. Holtje received an LL.M. in National Security Law from The George Washington University Law School.