

Julian Meyrick

Vice President, IBM Security Europe

Julian Meyrick is Vice President for IBM Security Europe, the fastest-growing enterprise IT security company in the world.

In his leadership role, Julian helps clients in Europe develop a security strategy and employ the best technologies to meet their specific IT security needs. He is responsible for leading the IBM Security Europe team in the development and delivery of software and services offerings that protect enterprises with intelligent, integrated IT security solutions and expertise.

Previously Julian led the IBM's Security Services Division in Europe, delivering IT security consulting, security implementation services and managed security services to clients.

Julian has been assisting government to raise awareness of the business risk posed by the cyber security threat since 2005 and since 2013 has been a panel member at Oxford University's Cyber Security Centre and lectures to Warwick University's MSc Course on CyberSecurity and Management.

Julian is an active contributor in the UK Chapter of the Information Security Forum (ISF) and WW sponsor for IBM's membership of ISF.

In previous roles Julian has worked in IBM's corporate headquarters in New York and was selected to be Executive Assistant to the Chairman of IBM Europe, Middle East and Africa in Paris in 2004.

Julian joined IBM in 1995 after serving six years in the Royal Green Jackets in the British Army, including serving as the Regimental Signals Officer. He is married with three young children.
