

Heather Price

Heather Price has had a diverse consulting portfolio across the Pentagon, including providing solutions in weapons systems acquisition, strategic communication, private industry outreach, and business management to the U.S. Army, the Air Force, and the Department of Defense. Previously, she was International Business Development Manager for Raytheon Company, focused on expanding Raytheon's global growth and international weapons sales. She has also served as a Business & Industry Specialist on the Iraq/Afghanistan Investment & Reconstruction Task Force at U.S. Department of Commerce in Washington, DC and Baghdad, Iraq, and has worked with the Office of Iraq at U.S. Department of State. Active in her community, she is a volunteer at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts and is a proud member of the leadership team of the Defense Entrepreneurs Forum, a volunteer network of change agents aimed at developing a culture of innovation throughout the national security ecosystem. Heather holds a Master's in Foreign & Defense Policy from American University, a Bachelor's in International Politics from American University of Paris, and will begin the Disruptive Strategy executive education program through Harvard Business School in fall 2018. In her spare time, Heather is a classical musician, a passionate student of languages, and a competitive runner. She is a member of the Department of Defense Senior Professional Women's Association and the Association of the U.S. Army.
